MOOD: 😊 cheerful

MUSIC: Depeche Mode - Precious (Album Version)

I'm letting my bread robot make a loaf of pumpernickel bread with cherries in it to bring to work tomorrow.

I expect detailed critique.

This looks like a good idea.

This.

With cherries? Oooh. (I'll have to remind my mouth that just because it's dark stuff with cherries in it, it shouldn't expect chocolate.) But that seems like a good idea, on account of the sourness of pumpernickle.

The recipe called for raisins, and I was out.

But I had dried cherries and blueberries.

...actually, it does have a small amount of cocoa powder in it too.

Since the weather is so warm (in a rainy early spring hey this is not january kind of way) and it's nice and dark out, I got up early to get a "run" in before work, and it smelled so good I had to test-drive it.

Yum.

A little more molasses next time, maybe: I wanted more sweetness. But for robot bread, the texture is pretty good.

Well, I would say that the fact that it's GONE is diagnostic. (Wonder Woman had three slices.)

Three. Slices. There's not ROOM in her for that much bread.

I'd say that's my new favorite vehicle for conveying cream cheese to my mouth.

And so much for the (imperfectly covered-up) widely-held belief that I put hot cock sauce on everything.

I want to do something to it to make it a little more hygroscopic next time. It was slightly drier than I wanted.

Maybe honey?

COLLAPSE

It'll catch more flies that way, too.
